Gasholder 1

— Auditorium “Miltiadis Evert”

The new, fully renovated auditorium compliments Technopolis’s updated services, while being in harmony with the industrial aesthetic and the unique ambience of the old factory’s historic estate.

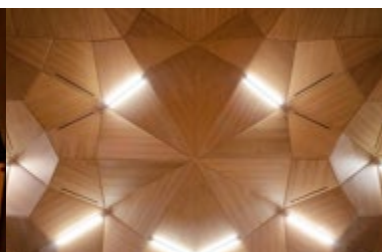

As part of its renovation, the auditorium underwent an important energy upgrade and its space autonomy was redesigned in compliance with current international standards. It is equipped with high quality audiovisual systems, a translation booth and a new, elevated stage with multiple uses. Its state-of-the-art ceiling consists of 564 pieces that amplify its passive acoustics, while the warm materials and diffuse lighting compose a contemporary, very particular aesthetic that sets apart this exceptional auditorium as a “signature” venue, a landmark for the whole city of Athens.

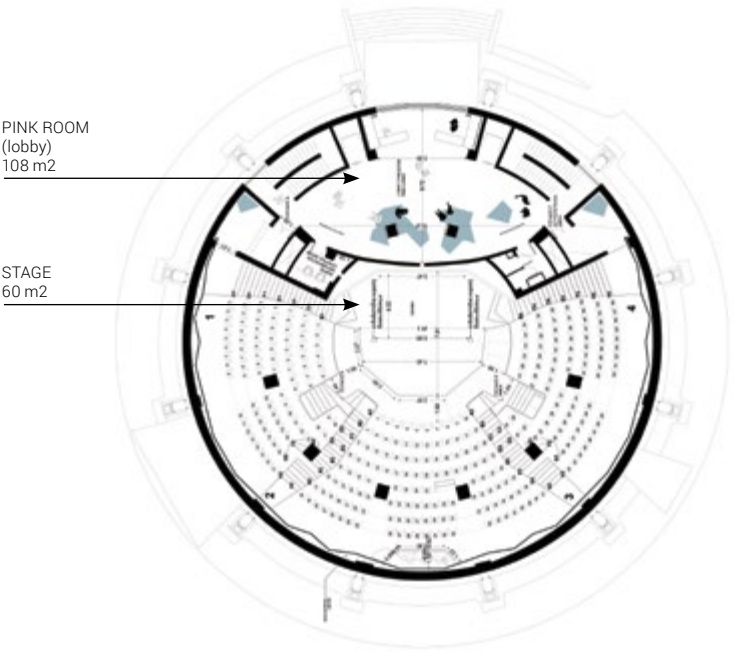

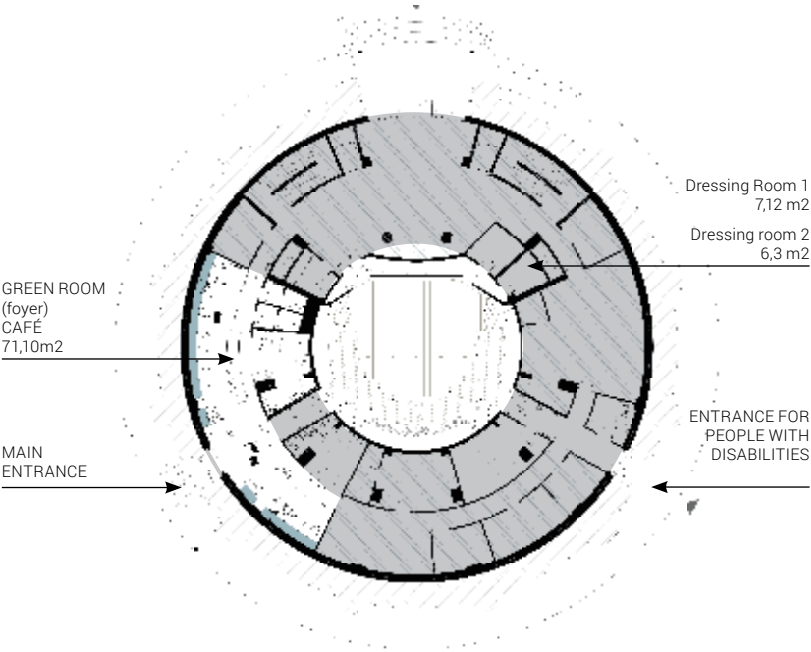

The Auditorium “Miltiadis Evert” has been named for the Greek politician, during whose mayorship in 1987, the 1st non-state radio station, Athina 9.84, was founded. The radio station is also housed, along with the auditorium, within the historic Gasholder 1, one of the most remarkable buildings of in the area, that stands out due to its stone base and intricate exterior.

Auditorium's state-of-the-art infrastructures cover a wide range of events:

- Theatrical and musical performances
- Concerts
- Film screenings
- Conferences, seminars, lectures
- Corporate events
- Award ceremonies
- Presentations of new products & services
- Press events

Two additional foyers equipped with a café and seating areas with screens for live-streaming from the main hall, as well as a cloakroom and a reception-info desk further enhance the up-scaled functionality of the new auditorium "Miltiadis Evert".
